DEAD AT THIRTY.
Just for the sake of being called a good fellow.
Just for the praise of the sycophant crowd, That smoked your cigars, quaffed your rich wines and mellow.
You are sleeping to-day, 'neath the sod in your shroud.
Just for the sake of being called clever—dashing—
By human hog sliving outside of a pen, The rain on your cold bed is ceaselessly spilling.
While you should be living—a man among men!
Just for the sake of being pointed at—looked at—
By the false, insincere, hypocritical crew, That grows on the follies of weak brains—like weeds—
You are as dead as the dreams your boyish soul knew.
You feigned a contempt for the eagles so yellow—
And scattered them broadcast with boisterous mirth—
Just for the sake of being called a good fellow.
You are nothing to-day but a boxful of earth.

A Morning Walk.

BY ARO.
"To him who in the lore of nature holds Communion with her visible forms; she speaks A various language; for his gayer hours She has a voice of gladness, and a smile, And eloquence of beauty, and she glides Into his darker musings, with a mild And healing sympathy that steals away Their sharpness ere he is aware." How delightful is a walk now, in this pleasant month of April, through the sloping woodlands, while the day is yet young. What if the young grass is still wet with dew? our boots are stout and "walking wise." We stroll on through the more open forest to the thickets beyond. Here in this sheltered spot the thick brown carpet of pine straw is being broken through, here and there, by the graceful fern sprays, and by the tender green leaves of other shade-loving plants.

As we go a little further on, here is a break in the trees where the sun shines through, touching all things with his soft, caressing beams, and calling here into his "presence chamber," innumerable wild flowers. There is the tall dog-wood, tempting with its lovely greenish white stars the little girl there who is not quite tall enough to reach them; clumps of wild honeysuckle covered with masses of heavily odorous pink tubes, and look at those two slender saplings with their heads enveloped in clouds of yellow jasmynes, the ground below strewn with detached flowers.
There is something else down there, besides detached blossoms; all around you the ground is sprinkled with blue-eyed violets, pink tipped daisies, golden buttercups, and the delicate little "in-nocents."

The ground gets wetter, now, and here we are at the edge of a shallow pond, the surface of which is in some places covered with a little yellow flower on a slender stem, which appears to be floating on the water. It is the delicate utricularia, the root of which is wheel-shaped and filled with air, thus enabling the flower, which grows from the centre, to appear as if floating. Over on the shady side of the pond a few pure looking lilies are still open; flags, and the thick green leaves of the "bonnets," fringe the edge, and at our feet are countless water violets. Soon the pleasure of looking on this scene will not be altogether unalloyed, for this pure and fair-appearing water will send out, after awhile, swarms of that "Fair insect that with thread-like legs spread out, and blood-extracting will, and filmy wings, Whispering into our swarming ears full many a plaintive thing."

We will lay the stems of the flowers that we have gathered into the cool water, and sit here on this mossy log to rest and listen to the clear sweet music of the birds. The wood is full of the little songsters, and we listen with delight to the soft coo of the dove, the sweet never-varying song of the thrush, the full-throated lay of our prince of songsters, the mocking bird, and many others too numerous to mention. As we listen to them and look up at them, surely our hearts and thoughts should go higher than their little wings can carry them.

How the lovely morning and the bird songs recall images and things of other days!
"The cool Autumn evening—the fair Summer morn—
The dress and the aspect some loved ones have worn—
The sunny places—the shady lilies—The words and the faces that might not abide."
Bright mornings when we rambled the woods and looked for wild flowers long ago. And then, perhaps, a picture, "sad and strange," of that other "dark summer morn" comes before us when we watched in helpless grief, while the "earliest pipe of half-awakened birds" came to "dying ears," and to eyes that we loved "the casement slowly gave a glimmering square."

The singing breeze in the pine-trees—"the grand anthem of the forest trees"— chimes in with our musings. Suddenly a kingfisher darts down to the water, reminding us that his day's work is begun and so should ours. We begin, regretfully, to retrace our steps, wondering why men should leave this pleasant land to seek for beauty elsewhere, since

"Here be woods as green as any,
Air, likewise, as fresh and sweet As where cool Zephyrs play on the fleet Face of the curled stream. Here be all new delights, Cool streams and wells, arbors o'ergrown with woodbine, Cores and dells. Choose where thou wilt."

INDIGNATION.—When a man manifests a righteous indignation at the wrong-doing of others, it is not always safe to infer that he possesses a like indignation at his own wrong-doing.
Indeed, it sometimes happens that the man who is loudest in condemning some particular form of evil-doing, is himself the greatest sinner in some other form which is just as grossly sinful. Every one possesses to himself a share of universal human nature, and there is no evil which others do which he will not find in himself, as a possibility at least, if he looks for it. One who recognizes this truth will be more likely to be merciful in his judgment of the sins of others; and to be stern in his judgment of his own.—Sunday School Times.

Men are responsible for the light they might have, as well as for that which they actually enjoy.—Tennyson.

Lincoln's Poetry.

A correspondent of the Lagrange, Ind., Register, writing from the neighborhood of Abraham Lincoln's old home, says:

About 80 rods from the dwelling spot is the grave of his mother. She is buried in the center of a tract of twenty acres of woods, on the top a large hill, the woods not being fenced. Around the grave is an iron fence, and at the head is a plain but substantial stone, upon which are carved the few words:
"Nancy Hanks Lincoln, Mother of President Lincoln. Died Oct. 5, A.
D., 1818. Aged 35 years. Erected by a friend of her martyred son." While in the neighborhood I called upon an old lady who was one of Lincoln's nearest neighbors. She knew "Abe" when a mere boy and until he was grown. He often worked for her husband shucking corn, etc. She said he was the greenest looking, the most awkward, gawkiest acting fellow she ever saw. But for all that he was honest and very tender hearted. He had but one sister and at her marriage he composed and sang a song for the occasion. The old lady repeated it, and I copied it verbatim et literatim. She stating that it had never been in print:

When Adam was created
He dwelt in Eden shade;
As Moses has recorded,
And soon a bride was made.
Ten thousand times ten thousand Of creatures swarmed around, Before a bride was found,
And yet no mate was found.
The God he was not willing That man should be alone;
But caused a sleep upon him,
And took from him a bone.
Then closed the flesh instead thereof And then he took the same,
And out of made a woman,
And brought her to the man.
Then Adam he rejoiced,
To see his lovely bride;
A part of his own body,
The product of his side.
This woman was not taken From Adam's head, we know;
To show she must not rule him By authority so.
This woman was not taken From Adam's feet, we see;
So he must not abuse her,
The meaning seems to be.
This woman she was taken From under Adam's arm;
So she must be protected From injuries and harm.

How Women Should Wear Their Hair.

A lady asks if the hair coiled low in the nape of the neck has gone entirely out of fashion. Certainly not, and it never will. This country is full of sensible women who, in a matter even so simple as the arrangement of their own hair dressing, to say nothing of far weightier questions, have a mind and an eye of their own. The arbitrary observance of a certain style of coiffure or a certain style in dress is to-day almost a tradition. We will add, however, that crown braids and high coilures arranged a la Josephine or in Janese style have almost invariably taken the lead in hair dressing for the warmer seasons for several years past.
It is a really more cool and comfortable style for summer, and where it is becoming, it will be more generally adopted than the classic coiffure a la Laugry, so long the favored arrangement.—N. Y. Evening Post.

In February last John B. Harrell, a young man at Georgetown, was bitten on the hand and arm by a small dog, which he at once killed. The wounds healed and nothing further was thought of the matter until Saturday last, when Harrell suddenly died, with all the horrible symptoms of hydrophobia.
He lingered in great agony until Wednesday, when death put an end to his sufferings.
